

Hailing from les Îles-de-la-Madeleine, a small archipelago in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, Canada, Luce Bourbeau completed her undergraduate degree in political science and economics, with honours, at McGill University and her law degree at the University of Montreal. Prior to joining the Montreal-based maritime law firm Brisset Bishop in 2022, Luce articulated and briefly practiced in a leading Canadian firm. Following her call to the bar, Luce took a leave of absence from legal practice for approximately two years to compete in road bike racing at the Elite level in North America and Europe. She currently assists colleagues and clients in all areas of Brisset Bishop's practice, including dispute resolution, commercial and regulatory matters. Luce also acts as a subgroup rapporteur for the Comité Maritime International's International Working Group on Polar Shipping. Her role entails drafting a working paper on Indigenous rights and Arctic shipping with input provided by other subgroup members. She is an accomplished athlete who loves the outdoors and, before her cycling career, she represented Canada in rowing at the international level at the 2013 Under 23 World Championships.
