

Phillip A. Buhler has been practicing maritime law for some thirty-five years in the United States, representing shipowners, operators, insurers and other commercial interests in many aspects of maritime casualties, environmental issues and regulatory matters. His firm is a correspondent for most members of the International Group of P&I Clubs. He has served as an instructor in international and US civil procedure at the Universitat zu Koeln, and has taught courses in maritime law and intermodal transportation at the Universitat Hamburg. Mr. Buhler has served on the Board of Directors of the Maritime Law Association of the United States and as Chair of its International Organizations, Conventions and Standards Committee, during which time he directed a focus towards emerging Polar shipping issues. He is active in the Comité Maritime International and serves on its Polar Shipping International Working Group and its Antarctica Sub-Committee. Mr. Buhler is a Ph.D. candidate at Dalhousie University, developing a thesis concerning application of non-prescriptive regulatory options to commercial shipping in the Polar regions. He received his BA from the College of William & Mary, his J.D. from the University of Miami and his LL.M. (Admiralty) from Tulane University. He is the author of numerous articles, book chapters and a book on maritime and international law issues.
